US Fish and Wildlife Service

The Service is the lead federal agency for conservation of migratory birds, threatened and endangered species, certain marine mammals, and fish. This includes the management of national wildlife refuges and fish hatcheries; habitat conservation and hunting regulations for migratory birds; listing and recovery actions for endangered species; conservation and enhancement of wetlands; biological review of the environmental impacts of some development projects; and enforcement of federal wildlife laws such as the Endangered Species Act, the Lacey Act, the Marine Mammal Protection Act, and the Migratory Bird Treaty Act. The Service administers fish and wildlife restoration grant programs to state governments, provides technical assistance to state and foreign governments, serves as lead federal agency in international conventions on wildlife conservation and operates an education program to enhance the public's understanding and appreciation of America's fish and wildlife resources.
